Pedagogical idea/Basic view

TEACHING PORTFOLIO, professor Pieter Vanhuyse

1. Pedagogical idea/Basic view

I strongly believe in the value and societal importance of university teaching. This is an integral and intrinsically enormously valuable and important task of university professors at all levels. Intrinsic is key here on both sides: one teaches and learns best when one does it for its own sake rather than because of external rewards or pressures -- i.e. out of a genuine sense of mission, resp. interest. Interactive and discussion-based teaching is key here. Second, I strongly believe in the value of a sustained and wide rather than narrow reading and education across various fields and subfields for students. This, in order to give students a solid basis in understanding multiple approaches to any given major social science topic or problem, and the multiple social, cultural, economic, and political-institutional causal forces and social mechanisms at work behind almost any social-scientifically important event. Some of my views on this educational philosophy have been published in Education Review (Vanhuyse 2006).

This means at least two things. First, students at all levels should ideally be thoroughly familiarized not just with groundbreaking contemporary work but also with classic contributions to the field of study in question. Crucially, students should also be deeply familiar with the best writing on various logics of social explanation. Political science and social science more generally advance fastest by developing and then falsifying (or contingently corroborating) new theories aiming to explain interesting social phenomena or puzzles. This implies that students ought to be deeply immersed in the most insightful general books on the logics of social explanation. Second, to stimulate original research contributions, graduate-level students ought also to be given a strong familiarity with selected seminal contributions beyond their field from related and partly overlapping fields. For political science students this would include for instance public policy, political economy, sociology, and behavioral economics. The aim is to provide the basis for cross-fertilizing insights from various disciplines and angles, and thus at least the potential for genuinely original new insights and theories subsequently. In this respect, to use Isaiah Berlin's famous metaphor, my sympathies as a teacher (and researcher) are more with foxes than with hedgehogs (Vanhuyse 2006).

Teaching Experience

2. Teaching Experience

I have supervised numerous undergraduate and graduate essays and theses as well as project collaborations such as informal reading groups. I have a genuine love of, and long experience in, teaching, fine-tuned over more than 30 university courses taught at the BA, MA and PhD levels at academic institutes in Denmark, the Czech Republic, England, Hungary, Israel, Italy, Lithuania, Spain and Poland. At SDU, in addition to extensive teaching at the political science department, I have co-founded 'Radical Rethink,' our first-ever five-faculty interdisciplinary talent course, in which I taught as the SAMF Faculty representative.

Former students have landed internships at institutions such as the European Parliament, Bertelsmann Stiftung and the Centre for European Policy Studies in Brussels, doctoral positions at the universities of Gothenburg, SDU and EUI, and entry-level jobs at the European Food Safety Authority, the UNICEF Division in Copenhagen, and various Danish Ministries including Employment, Education, and Agriculture.

At SDU, I have taught the following courses:

BA Economic Principles and Politics (course responsible and teacher of 22 sessions (the politics part): fall 2016, fall 2017, fall 2018, fall 2019, fall 2020, fall 2022, foreseen fall 2023

BA Offentlig Politik (Public Policy) (course responsible): fall 2020, fall 2022, foreseen fall 2023

MA Great Debates in Political Science (course responsible and teacher of five sessions and add-ons): Fall 2022, foreseen fall 2023

MA and BA Human Capital Politics and Policies: Investing in People (course responsible): summer 2019, summer 2022, foreseen summer 2023

BA Politisk Teori (Political Theory) (teacher of 5 sessions): spring 2023

MA Ethics and Public Policy (course responsible): Spring 2021

MA and BA Radical Rethink talent program: The Future of Aging Societies (co-designer, first ever five-faculty interdisciplinary course at SDU): summer 2019-spring 2020

MA Political Behavior and Party Politics (15 lectures and add-ons; fall 2016, fall 2017, fall 2018)

MA Comparative Welfare State Policies (course responsible, 15 lectures and blended lessons; fall 2015, fall 2016, fall 2017, fall 2018)

MA Understanding Social Policies (course responsible, 15 lectures and blended lessons): fall 2019
MA Politics of Labor Market Reforms (7 sessions and add-ons; spring 2017, spring 2018, spring 2019, spring 2020)
MA Contemporary Crises of Capitalism (courser responsible, co-taught with Paul Marx): fall 2016
MA Development and Reform of Welfare States (co-taught with Luis Moreno): fall 2015
BA Sociology (3 guest lectures; fall 2018, fall 2019)

I have also supervised and mentored two colleague teachers in the lecturer training program at SDU (MSO Prof Anette Baudisch, Associate Prof Dennis Spies).

I have taught Erasmus-plus block courses as a guest lecturer at the Universities of Prague (2017) and Vilnius (2019) and a doctoral course at the Doctoral School in Social Sciences of Jagiellonian University, Cracow, Poland (2022)

3. Pedagogical competence/acquisition

I have been teaching courses as course chair (not teaching assistant) to various audience since 1998, at twelve different universities, which has allowed me to build up a great stock of craftsmanship and teaching experience. I have also been on the teaching staff of a large Faculty of Education for seven years (University of Haifa), where the main target audience was current and future teachers and where all lecturers were given frequent informal coaching on pedagogical skills, best-practice advice and new developments.

For tests and exams, I have used various formats including multiple-choice exams, oral exams, take-home exams, and weekly participations in and presentations to class. I have wide experience in teaching methods, including teaching and co-teaching ex cathedra, by means of seminars and workshops, and one-to-one tutoring. As a believer in interdisciplinarity and innovation, and Senior Fellow at the interdisciplinary Danish Institute for Advanced Study (DIAS), I have also been a co-founding teacher (and the SAMF Faculty representative) of SDU's first ever 5-faculty course 'Radical Rethink! The Future of Aging Societies - SDU INTER Talent program' (Studyboard of Market and Management Anthropology, Economics, Mathematics-Economics, and Environment, Odense, summer 2019-spring 2020).
