Pedagogical approach

In my teaching, I focus on giving the students two things: A good theoretical foundation and experience in using and communicating the theoretical content. My goal is therefore that the students by the end of the course feel academically equipped to be able to use and communicate the theory in both the exam situation and in a future job. In my attempt to achieve this goal, I use a mix of traditional "monological" teaching and high degree of involvement and participation from the students.

It is my experience that the students best learn the theoretical content in a course by "tasting it" and discussing it with their fellow students and I. Therefore, in the teaching I use shorter assignments and longer cases, where the students get to test their argumentation in plenum. I also use jurisprudence to exemplify the theoretical content.
