Research

IT & organization, Business intelligence, Data Science.

Current focus: company self-presentation through company webpages where environmental sustainability and greenwashing are investigated through scraping of company webpages and joined with economic databases, company ratings, and human observation. Python is used for webpage scraping, SAS for analysis and presentation, and both for aggregation / disaggregation and data management.

I am a sociologist and data scientist and uses data archiving, data warehousing, business intelligence, organization, methods and metadata in teaching, development, and research. Company research is primarily quantitative and often includes methodological challenges, mixed methods and new use of data as nonresponse and unobtrusive measuring and content analysis of webpages.

My work within data science and the connection to research in metadata of social science data and data archiving is also found in my editorship of IASSIST Quarterly from 1997 to 2023. IASSIST Quarterly is the journal of International Association for Social Science Information Services and Technology. (<https://iassistquarterly.com>)
