

Teaching Experience

My teaching experience at the University of Southern Denmark (SDU) has been accumulated through 1 year of work as PhD student and 2 semesters as a bachelor's level instructor, while being a student. Teaching Market Ethnography I have experience in teaching qualitative, ethnographic methods. I also have experience in supervising bachelor's theses at the programs Market & Management Anthropology and Negot, which are based on qualitative data collection. For this reason I have experience in supporting student in research design, qualitative data collection, data analysis, theoretical development and written dissemination.

2020	Market Ethnography (10 ECTS master's course at the department of Marketing & Management, SDU)
2017	Academic Writing Practice (bachelor's tutorial class at the department of Marketing & Management, SDU)
2015	Global Organizations (bachelor's tutorial class at the department of Political Science & Public Management, SDU)

Pedagogical Competence

My pedagogical competences I have from teaching and instructing the above master's course and tutorials classes, as well as from presenting conference papers at national and international conferences (see Public CV).

Teaching Philosophy

My teaching philosophy emphasizes curiosity and real life application. By providing the students with a foundation through structured conventional lecturing, I hope to invoke confidence in the material for the students, to then next be able to challenging and question this and not least understand how it can be applied in real life. Feeding this atmosphere I make great use of examples, other as well as my own, as I believe and from experience can tell this inspires critical questions, curiosity and possibilities for application among the students.
