Education:

2015: Lecturer Training Programme, University of Southern Denmark

2009: Basic University Pedagogy, Aarhus University

Teaching experience:

2010-: Teaching American history and politics at BA and MA-level (Aarhus University, University of Copenhagen, Copenhagen Business School and University of Southern Denmark /SDU - since 2014, only at SDU). I have taught a lot of courses on the history of American foreign relations in different formats, as well as courses in American business history, American society and philosophy of science (American Studies). I enjoy co-teaching, as I have done several times, for example in a 2017 interdisciplinary MA course on the Global War on Terror.

Supervision experience:

2014-: Supervision of BA and MA projects on a broad range of topics (history of American foreign relations and international politics, American business, US politics, US cultural history).

Curriculum development:

I am always keen to develop new courses and new programs. In the BA program in American Studies, I have developed the History of American Foreign Relations course from 2015 in its entirety. On the MA level, I have developed a new course from 2019, American Studies in Practice, which allows students to create projects with external partners and thus build bridges to the labor market.

Administrative experience:

2018-: Head of Studies for American Studies. Responsible for American Studies BA and MA programs, day-to-day management, student relations etc.

I am currently working on a complete overhaul of exam forms in
