Teaching CV

Teaching Experience

I have since I became employed by the University of Southern Denmark in 2004 taught at all levels, from first-semester BA courses to MA-level and Ph.D courses. During the last five years, these have at BA level regularly included Introduction to Comparative Religion, Modern Christianity, and Islam, and at MA level the courses American Religion and 'Alternative' and Popular Religion.

Supervision

I have supervised numerous students at all levels, from BA students to doctoral candidates.

Course Development

All courses I have taught have been developed by me, from the initial planning and syllabus construction to implementing them in the classroom.

Administrative Experience in Connection with Teaching

I was for many years part of the Study Board ("Studienævn") for the Study of Religion.

Formal and Informal Didactic Training

I received didactic training when I began my academic career, before joining the staff at the University of Southern Denmark, and have followed courses given by the University of Southern Denmark in how to supervise Ph.D. candidates. Informally, I exchange ideas and share experiences with colleagues and regularly discuss the modalities of how to teach students.
